

A photograph of a stone wall with a tower in the background, set against a sunset sky. The wall is made of large, dark stones and has several small arched openings. The tower is a square structure with a pointed roof. The sky is a mix of orange, red, and purple, with a bright sun visible in the center. The overall mood is dramatic and historical.

I want to give a big thanks to Mike for having me here and also for doing the e-commerce project together. It was an awesome, really great experience, I of course I learned a lot about doing e-commerce business. This is my first e-commerce or FBA business in fact and also doing business in China in general.

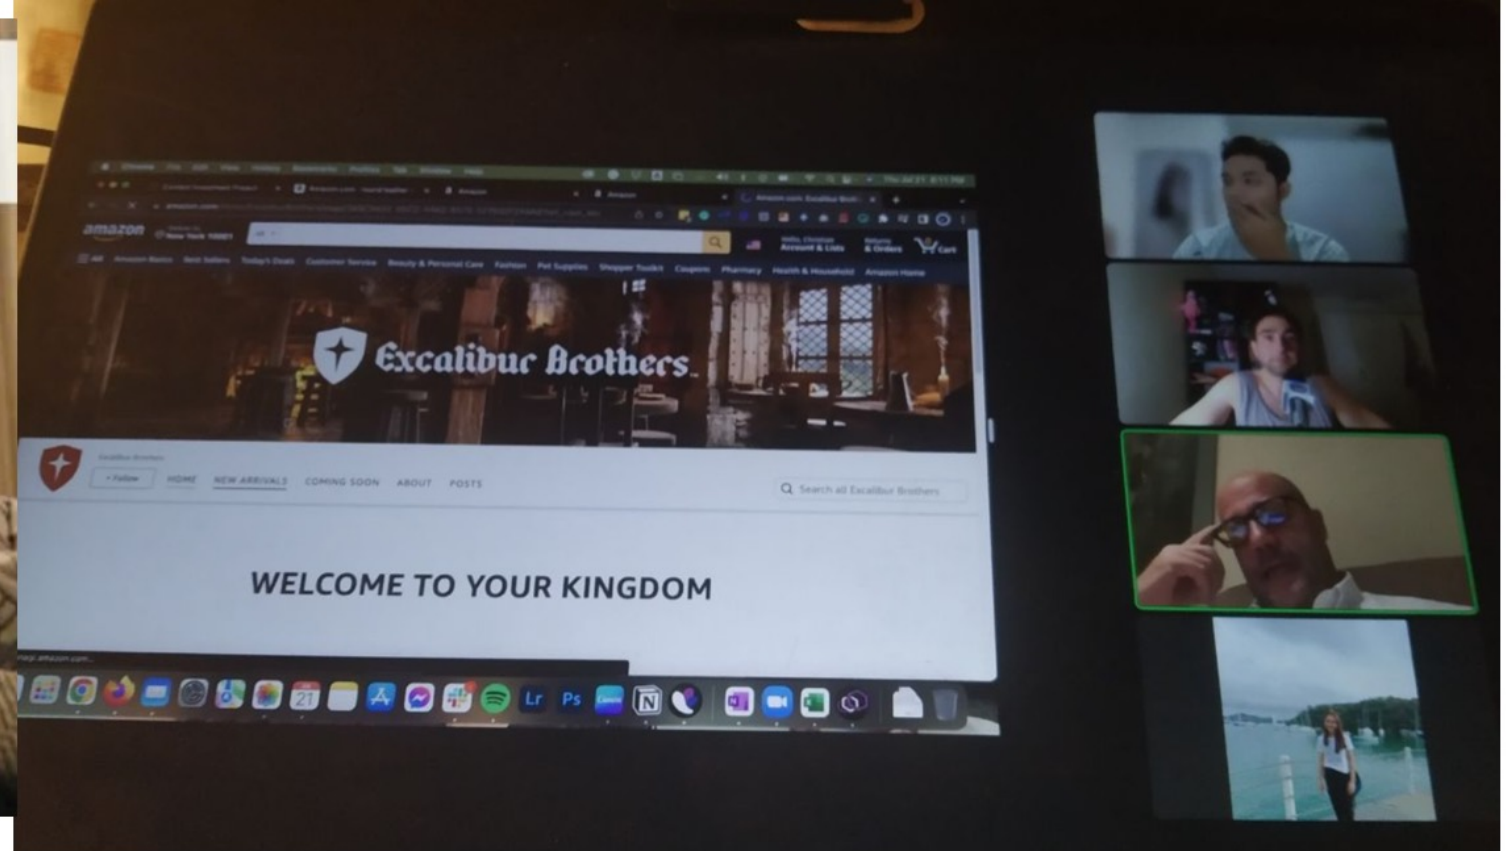

I learned a lot on how to being organized or working with people 24/7 all through the internet. We had Freelancers and VA's and yeah, it requires a totally new set of skills. So it was, sometimes, it's overwhelming to be honest, but we got through a lot of the obstacles and I was very happy when we had our first product on Amazon selling and yeah, I just think it was amazing.

Red Alert: ICANN and Verisign Proposal Would Allow Any Government In The World To Seize Domain Names

George Kirikos

April 19, 2023

domain names, ICANN

ICANN, legal, Verisign

ICANN, the organization that regulates global domain name policy, and Verisign, the abusive monopolist that operates the .COM and .NET top-level domains, have quietly proposed enormous changes to global domain name policy in their recently published “Proposed Renewal of the Registry Agreement for .NET”, which is now open worst aspect). However, carefully examine the new text in Section 2.7(b)(ii) on page 148 of the redline document.

It would allow Verisign, via the new text in 2.7(b)(ii)(5), to:

” deny, cancel, redirect or transfer any registration or transaction, or place any domain name(s) on registry lock, hold or similar status, as it deems necessary, in its unlimited and sole discretion” [the language at the beginning of 2.7(b)(ii), emphasis added]

Then it lists when it can take the above measures. The first 3 are non-controversial (and already exist, as they’re not in blue text). The 4th is new, relating to security, and might be abused by Verisign. But, look at the 5th item! I was shocked to see this new language:

“(5) to ensure compliance with applicable law, government rules or regulations, or pursuant to any government rules or regulations, or pursuant to any legal order or subpoena of any government, administrative or governmental authority, or court of competent jurisdiction,” [emphasis added]

(aii) a provision that requires the Registered Name Holder to acknowledge and agree that Verisign reserves the right to deny, cancel, redirect or transfer any registration or transaction, or place any domain name(s) on registry lock, hold or similar status, as it deems necessary, in its unlimited and sole discretion: (1) to comply with specifications adopted by any industry group generally recognized as authoritative with respect to the Internet (e.g., RFCs), (2) to correct mistakes made by Verisign or any Registrar in connection with a domain name registration, ~~or~~ (3) for the non-payment of fees to Verisign; ~~and~~, (4) to protect against imminent and substantial threats to the security and stability of the Registry TLD, System, Verisign’s nameserver operations or the internet, (5) to ensure compliance with applicable law, government rules or regulations, or pursuant to any legal order or subpoena of any government, administrative or governmental authority, or court of competent jurisdiction, and/or (6) to stop or prevent any violations of any terms and conditions of this Agreement, the Operational Requirements, or pursuant to Verisign’s Registry Agreement with ICANN; and

(5) to ensure compliance with applicable law, government rules or regulations, or pursuant to any legal order or subpoena of any government, administrative or governmental authority, or court of competent jurisdiction

The background is a dark, artistic illustration of a man's face. The face is rendered with a complex, skull-like texture, showing internal structures like the eye sockets and nasal cavity. The man has a beard and is looking slightly to the left. The overall tone is somber and mysterious. Overlaid on this image is white text in a typewriter-style font.
